Dogs have lived with us for thousands of years, winning the reputation of "man's best friend" for good reason. But although some people can be rose to rule out the devotion of a dog as simply a relationship based on need, experts say that is not true. The dogs have developed the stronger capacity of all animals on Earth to form affectionate live Organization that helps adopters find love partners. "Dogs do not only love us," they need us, but not only for the feeding and physical attention. They need us emotionally. That is why the attachment vein it is, as has been said often, unconditional. " But how exactly does a dog say, "I love you? Read on to find out. If your dog is always in your lap, leaning against you or following your room to the room, it is clear that the Pooch of him is attached to you. "The affection of a dog is more evident in your desire to be physically close to you. This may sometimes seem like a clinginess, and it is not always difficult. Dog is deeply attached to you, "says McMillan. When you and your puppy share a long look, your dog is "Hugging You with His Eyes", according to Brian Hare, professor at the Duke University who studies canine cognition, and research shows that this "Hug" has a deep effect on The man and the animal. When the scientists of the Azabu University of Japan took samples of dog urine and their owners before and after 30 minutes of interaction, they found that the pairs that have spent time looking into the eyes of each eraH eraH qjid, "anamuh n'Anu ed ametis le odartseuces nah sorrep sol euq ereigus euq elbAerni ogzallah nu sE". sonamuh sAbeh sol a enu son euq lanomroh atseupser amsin al ,lanomroh anicotixo al ed sotla sAm etnemavitacifingis selevin Love eyes like this can say a lot. Best Friends Animal Society Does your pup jump, take off your tail and just seem able to contain your emotion when you get home? If so, it is a sure sign of affection. "This becomes even more obvious when your dog learns, like Pavlov's dogs, that some sound indicates their next arrival, such as the garage opener or the sound of your car, and show excitement when you hear that sound," McMillan says. Dogs are packing animals that often hug at night for warmth and protection, so when your dog gets with you, it means that you consider that you are part of the family. And these canine cuddles can even help you sleep better. "A lot of affection on animals and humans is based on how much you can trust as a source of comfort and support in situations of fear," says McMillan. "If your dog seeks your comfort during storms, rides by car, veterinarian visits or other terrifying occurrences, then you are seeing another aspect of your attachment to you." A close bond with your dog can allow you to feel your mood and respond with affection. "Many dogs who feel they're upset or don't feel well will show their affection for spending even more time next to them. They could lick you or rest your head or legs somewhere in your body," McMillan says. A cute canine can make the day a little better. Brian Goodman/Shutterstock If you've ever bounced after witnessing another person's yawn, you're aware of how contagious the act can be. This contagious yawn is unique to a few species, and the best friend of man is one of them. The researchers have even found that they are not only dogs more likely to yawn after seeing family people yawn, but also that dogs will yawn when listening only to the sounda lover.
